PAJAMA-CLAD BROKER FOUND DEAD IN CAR

Real Estate Man Paid Visit In El Cerrito On Wednesday

Clad only in his pajamas, the body of Frederick Siemens, prominent Redwood City real estate man, was found yesterday at the wheel of his automobile in the garage of his Redwood City home.

Siemens had not been seen since Wednesday, when he had visited with relatives in El Cerrito.

The body was found by a neighbor, William E. Nielson, who became suspicious when he noticed that the door of Siemens' home had been left open for several days.

Cause of the death offered a mystery to police officers and deputy sheriffs.

They discounted any suggestions that Siemens had met foul play, but advanced two theories: 1—Siemens had suffered a heart attack.

Just Shocking! Women's Limbs Subjected To Close Survey

Only Ten Per Cent Have Good Looking Ones; Rest Are—Well!

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, May 26.—Only ten per cent of U. S. women have good looking legs.

Nine tenths of them only help the other ten to win the glance of men.

These are the assertions of the Independent, a national weekly which appears to be trying to do something generous for the sex title men who are fighting for longer skirts.

Anyway the paper has divided legs as follows:

Plano legs 15 per cent
Chunnel staked 25 per cent
Ankleless or salt sack 25 per cent

Bandy or bow 17 1/2 per cent
Knock-knees 12 1/2 per cent

After discussing the "many misguided sisters" the paper says: "Ninety per cent of all legs on exhibition are not worth looking at twice."

"The victims of fashion cannot be aware how silly they look, and how they play into the hands of the other ten per cent who are physically equipped to win admiration by exposing their calves."

"For our part we are weary of legs."

"The biologic fact that woman is a two legged animal has been amply demonstrated. It remains to be seen whether woman is as smart as she was in the good old days when an inch of stocking above the shoe top was more alluring than bare skin above the knee in this emancipated era."

Winter's Offers Holiday Service

Many Richmond people have taken advantage of this unique service, according to Mr. Winters.

PROTEST FILED AGAINST RISKS TAKEN BY ACE

Visit Of Flyer Tempered With Political Significance

DETROIT, May 27.—Captain Charles Lindbergh will return to America by battleship placed at his disposal by President Coolidge his mother announced here late today. He said that her son had informed her of his plans by cable. He will leave for the United States on June 16.

(By C. F. BERTELLI)
(By Universal Service)

PARIS, May 27.—A strong movement against allowing Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh to take unnecessary risks has been started here following his unannounced spectacular stunts which he accomplished early this morning.

When, on a French racing plane, he gave a realistic imitation of a chase and air battle against a French aviator above Paris.

Francis Perrot

Curiously enough, such a movement originated among the French.

"Were Lindbergh a French citizen, we would not permit him to endanger his life on overland trips," was the gist of opinion expressed to me by several senators and deputies in the lobby of the chamber today.

"See Berliot," they said. "He was our pioneer and the forerunner of our new regular Paris-London and other cross channel services. After his first flight over the channel he never crossed the channel again and never flew unless it was necessary."

"As a master expert, he was obliged later to go up to personally try some new feature in (Continued on Page 3)

The child had been ill with pneumonia for several days, firemen being called when it was determined that his breath was about to cease. After inducing artificial respiration for several hours, the workers were rewarded with an apparent return of life, but the child was finally pronounced dead after more than six hours' use of the inhalator.

Bliss originally agreed to pay his wife $1,000 a month when they were divorced in 1904. He cut the payments to $500 in 1917, claiming that his income had decreased.

The wife later entered suit for the full amount and trustees for her estate continued the suit after her death in 1922. The court upheld their contention.

South Dakota Prepares For The Arrival Of President Coolidge

(By Universal Service)

RAPID CITY, May 27.—Lavish preparations are under way here today for the arrival of President Coolidge, who is expected to spend his vacation in the Black Hills.

The towering peaks, which overshadow this town, are the highest between the Rockies and the Atlantic sea coast, will give the President much to think about and talk about, and will provide great opportunities for the sport he likes most of all—fishing.

The highest peak, Mount Harney, towers 7,244 feet above sea level, more than 500 feet above Mount Mitchell in North Carolina.

They are rich in Indian lore, rich in fishing, rich in sports, rich in beauty.

The name Black Hills, is taken from the Indian "Paha" meaning Hills and "Sapa" meaning black. Although they are mountains, the residents of the state have steadfastly refused to have the name changed. To the natives of the region, they are still known as Pahasapa.

They were called Pahasapa by the Indians because of the dark growth of pine which covers the mountainsides.

Famous historical characters have made the Black Hills famous. "Wild Bill" Hickok met his death there; Deadwood Dick still lives in the vicinity on a ranch, and what boy has not heard of the famous Deadwood stage coach and "Calamity Anne"?

The hills are rich in grotesque rock formation, in deep underground caverns, where one may wander miles in darkness.

Beautiful dales nestle among the hills, and noisy streams go tumbling down the gulches. Dark green pines, silvery birch, and stately spruce vie with the roses, lilies and host of wild flowers with which the region abounds, to paint the landscape in a lavish display of color.

Rapid Creek, well stocked with trout, will furnish the president all the fishing he desires. The record for the stream is a fourteen and a half pounder, but several of the ten and twelve pound variety have been found.

Thirty miles from the state Park hotel, where the president is expected to make his headquarters is Mount Rushmore, where Gutzon Borglum, famous sculptor, will begin work this summer on the great American memorial. The portraits on the mountainside for Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt. On another mountainside, he is expected to begin the "Portrait of America," as soon as he has completed his first commission.

Undoubtedly the most beautiful region in the entire hills is Custer State Park, near the entrance of which is the State Game Lodge, where the president will live.

Broad, modern highways lead through precipitous canyons. Along the roadside graze wild animals, mountain sheep, goats, elk, deer, antelope, buffalo, bears, coyotes and wolves are confined in pens.

In the south hills is Wind Cave, rival of the famous Mammoth Cave of Kentucky.

Adjacent to Wind Cave is Hot Springs, picture town of the hills, whose natural springs bubble forth medicinal waters in which thousands of visitors bathe annually.

The badlands, burial place of prehistoric animals, is another point of interest.

The hills are a natural spot, as yet unmarred by the hand of man. Indians relate that a venturesome band of Aborigines sought to explore the fastnesses of the hills, but were struck down by a Great Spirit with a shaft of forked lightning. Since that time, until recently, no Indians have ventured from the plains into the hills region.

CIVIC CENTER CLUB MEETS NEXT WEDNESDAY

Miss Dorothy Rector Becomes Bride Of Edward Phillips

Dorothy Elizabeth Rector became the bride of Edward Phillips last evening at a beautiful wedding at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Rector of 600 Anadori avenue, Mira Vista. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Earl Haney at 8:00 o'clock, and only the immediate family of the young couple were in attendance. Following the lovely ceremony all enjoyed an elaborate supper.

Miss Ruth Meredith Rector, sister of the bride, was the sole bridesmaid and John Harris of Oakland the best man. The bride wore a lovely rose georgette afternoon frock trimmed with gold and her attendant was charming in a light pink afternoon dress. Each carried harmonizing bouquets.

Directly after the supper party the newlyweds left for Yosemite valley. Upon their return from the honeymoon the young couple will make their home in San Francisco where the bride is director of kindergarten in the Richmond Academy. She will continue her interesting work.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Phillips of 3623 Nevada avenue, and is an employee of the Standard Oil Company. He is very well known in Richmond having attended school here.

GRANT SCHOOL PICNIC HELD BIG SUCCESS

The annual picnickers of Grant school enjoyed their jolly get-together at the school instead of going to Mosswood Park in Oakland as had been planned. Group lunches were enjoyed following which games were played. Later in the afternoon the mothers and their children came in to Richmond to attend one of the movies. The money for the picnic was earned by the P. T. A. at a recent home party, held at the home of Mrs. F. A. Feun.

Richmond Choral Club Changes Name Adopts Constitution

The name of the Richmond Choral club has been changed to the Richmond Musical club, following action taken at a meeting of the club in St. Edmund's guild hall yesterday.

New York Dandies Wear Straw Kellys With Brim Turned Down

By EDWARD M. RUTTENBER (By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, May 24. Gentlemen whose sang is terribly froid, are wearing loghorn and Panama straw hats turned down all the way around in New York this season, thus matching in a measure the huge summer head-wear worn by the slim young princes in the Metropolitan towers. The smaller the girl the bigger the floppy style of straw hat she prefers. In the subways only the man who looks down from a high altitude can avoid collisions with the vast overhead featured by the Misses Manhattan.

While there is much discussion of straw hats and straw hat styles for men the outstanding feature is the turned down brim on the soft-weave hats that are so widely popular. The Panama is in the lead at the present writing although fashion has decreed that the Panama should be worn preferably with broadwalk or sport costume. Mayor Jimmie Walker last the style in Havana last winter when he exploited white flannel reported to still be serious.

trousers, sports jacket, white and black sports shoes and a Panama flipped down all the way around. A few of the younger chaps are wearing body trims turned down on the side only but majority rule favors the all-around effect.

The proper assortment of straw hats includes in the case of the well-dressed man a split straw for wear with evening or dinner clothes, a rough braid sennit with modestly fancy band for business and a Panama or loghorn for sports wear. The one-time famous split straw, known as the "Tammany hat" because of its popularity with the 14th street rulers, is very rarely noted in the day dress of particular men and is vastly too expensive for the average consumer.

No Rare Wines For Lindbergh Orangeade Does

PARIS, May 27.—Lindbergh is not a prohibitionist, but he doesn't drink anything stronger here than mineral water and milk.

Many wines of rare vintage have graced the tables at the various luncheons and dinners at which Lindbergh was a guest, but he passed them up.

"When toasts are proposed, I lift my glass and touch my lips to the wine, because I do not want to appear rude or discourteous," said Lindbergh. "I do not drink; not because I am opposed to drink, but because I never have indulged in alcoholic beverages. I have no desire to start now. I am not, however, a prohibitionist."

At a reception given by Stephen Lausanne, famous French editor, Lindbergh was given his choice of champagne or orangeade.

"Orangeade, please. I am thirsty," said Lindbergh, and drank three glasses of it.

The spirit that moves us to honor those who have passed on into the realm of eternal shadow is representative of the tenderest of human emotions.

WAR THREATENS AS RESULT OF ENGLISH RAID

It took a long time before the rupture, it was only because it was seeking allies for a general attack upon the Soviet Union.

"When this policy was unsuccessful, then England decided to openly and independently attack, hoping that it would serve as a signal for the same kind of raids by other countries.

"Completely ridiculous and unconvincing was Premier Baldwin's speech in the House of Commons. His attempt to justify the break resembled a movie drama, with all the elements of a good American thriller.

Raid For Break

"Who will doubt, after that speech, that the break was the result of the raid, but what the raid was made to prepare for the break?

"The raid was not justified by Baldwin, even purely from the police point of view, since he admits that the documents which were so stormily reacted for were not found.

"Having gone bankrupt in the central plan, Baldwin is now clutching at other allegedly found documents — with catastrophic consequences for peace. Even if it were proven that the employees of Arcos Limited carried 'criminal' correspondence with the trades unions and other workers' organizations, then must the concern for which the delinquents worked be held responsible.

"Must the trade delegation be held responsible if its employees violate the rules not to disobey the laws of the country in which they are living, not to interfere with internal affairs, nor engage in propaganda?

"Regarding the accusation of espionage against the trade delegation, I must resent it as a vicious insinuation. If they were guilty of espionage, why don't the police arrest and try them? Because of this simple reason: They haven't any proof.

"It takes peculiar shamelessness to accuse the Soviets, when the English were busy collecting secret Soviet government documents.

"Regarding Michael Borodin, I must declare that he is not in the service of the Soviet government and has no official connection with it. Our country will take every measure not to be caught unawares by the militaristic British government."

It was reported in diplomatic circles tonight that the Soviet government announced that British subjects living in Russia would not be requested to leave but that visas permitting a trip through the Soviet union would not be granted in the future.

MOSCOW, May 26.—"Business as usual."

This is the slogan under which English concessionaries and business men are rallied.

It is pointed out in English business circles here, chiefly connected with the Lena gold fields concessions, that the British government has not desired to break off trading with Russia, but only wished to cancel clauses of the trade agreement which the English alleged, the Russians had abused.

The decision as to whether British subjects will remain in Russia rests with the Soviet government.

It is stated at the British mission that it is likely the English will warn their nationals to withdraw from the country.

The British concessionaries and citizens, henceforth, will have the same status as the Americans, who are now in Russia without diplomatic representation.

Part of the British mission staff is leaving on Saturday. Upon the departure of Charge D'Affaires W. Peters, the representation of British interests will be turned over to another legation, probably Norwegian or Swedish.

Body Of Naval Man Is Found On Beach

The body of a United States navy man believed to be that of Lawrence Barton, 32, second-class pharmacist's mate at the Mare Island navy yard, missing since May 18, was found yesterday morning on the beach at Garrity's flat, near Pinole.

The body was found by a Chinese resident of a camp at Garrity's flat. It had been in the water ten days and the features were almost entirely undistinguishable.

The remains are at the Wilson and Kratzer morgue.

TRIALS HELD IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE CLASSIC

(By Universal Service)

SPEEDWAY, Indianapolis, Ind., May 27.—Whatever prospect any of the speed seekers had of securing after Frank Lockhart's trail heat record of 120.1 miles per hour, in today's trials around the most famous stretch of brick in Indianapolis, if not in America, was washed out shortly after lunch time.

Rain, which went so far as to cut a five hundred mile race into four fifths of that, a year ago, played havoc with the trials today, and left some nineteen prospective starters more or less out of luck.

The nineteen cannot all get in Monday's race at that, because the limit to the field is thirty three, and one more than a score qualified on Thursday. The odd one, however, L. L. Corum, a Dusenber driver, who was able to get a scant 94.6 miles per hour out of his bus, decided today that he had no business in the race with such a comparatively slow going vehicle, and unless he catches on as a relief driver for one of the other cars. Corum's cue will be in the race on Monday.

Corum's withdrawal leaves thirteen places open, if the field on Monday is to touch the limit number of thirty-three.

The top liners who haven't been out on the track for the qualifying round, as yet, are Tommy Milton, perhaps the most famous of all the speed demons, and Jules Ellingboe. Milton is to drive a Detroit Special, which was specially built to take Cliff Durant for a ride, but Cliff developed illness, and Milton had to reconsider a two year old decision to keep out of auto racing.

Ellingboe is to drive one of Earl Cooper's cars. The one, by the bye, which is credited with being the fastest, but which, for some reason, has not been out rolling over the bricks, as yet.

Other noteworthy developments of the rainy day in Indianapolis were the signing of Ira Vail, the dirt track negotiator, as a relief driver for Eddie Hearne, and the failure of the Dusenber camp to nominate the successor to Ralph De Palma, who took himself out of the race the other day, and hid himself hence. It may be that Ralph Williams will get the assignment.

There were few spectators out for today's trials, if any, a marked drop from the 18,000 curious ones of the day before.

The usual gathering was about the "stables" and a group talked learnedly of this "job" and that. A "job" in this company may be anything from a car itself to the cost of paint that it carries. The rain, interfering with today's trials, put it up to the officials to try and get in a double header tomorrow, and some of the lads may have to do some riding in the morning.

Ed Sullivan's SPORT WHIRL

THE SPIRIT OF HIGH ADVENTURE

Helen Willis and Gertrude Ederle are probably the only American athletes who have ever stirred this country to anything approaching the emotional frenzy precipitated by the gallant flight of Capt. Charles Lindbergh.

Helen Willis and Gertrude Ederle were youthful, and they were representing this country in international competition. They were modest. In those things they were on a level with Lindbergh. However, Lindbergh was dying with death, whereas both Helen and Gertrude were engaged in moderately safe and sane pursuits. Helen was facing Suzanne Lenglen, a dangerous foe, but one not afflicted with homicidal intent; Gertrude, swimming the English Channel, was always within range of a comforting tugboat.

Lindbergh was facing skies and ocean that had swallowed six men. He was alone save for the grinning death's head that rode along with him.

Lindbergh jostled with death for the fun of the thing; the sport of it.

With him, the game was the thing, and the game in this case was one to chill the stoutest heart and challenge the boldest adventurer.

He stirred America and the world as it has seldom been stirred since. Lindbergh made heroism a routine round on the savage fields of Ypres and Arras and Flanders.

Americans will proudly acclaim him as the typical American boy. But he is more than that. Bravery recognizes no national boundary. He is of the breed which has made this scarred planet a decent place to live; the blood which courses through him is the blood which has been willingly spilled on the battlefields of every age and every country.

Fighters arising over contracts and opponents; baseball players snarling at big league owners—how insane they seem in the reflection of the Flying Fool's disdainful grimace at death.

HE SHADOW-BOXED WITH DEATH

America, which has long glorified physical bravery as exemplified by fighters and jockeys and football heroes, chooses rightly on an exponent of mental bravery as its greatest idol in this hour.

Lindbergh's mental gameness was the factor which endeared him to every one who followed his flight.

He was fighting opponents he could not come to grips with. He was fighting the ghosts of six flyers who had gone before and lost. He was fighting a sullen Father Neptune, who licked his greedy lips in anticipation of another defiant morsel. He was fighting six tails of sleet that cunningly stole from clouds and settled on the wings of his plane, seeking to suffocate the panting wood and steel. He was fighting the blankness of nowhere, guessing at his route and peering ahead through a periscope.

Lindbergh fought an opponent he could not see but was ever present. And he was alone. No cheering crowd roared approval.

Mental bravery is far greater than physical bravery. The fighter, dazed by repeated blows, who pulls himself erect to face another storm of blows, is not necessarily courageous.

Reason would counsel him to stay down on the canvas; it is only instinct that brings him up against his will.

Lindbergh was keenly alive to the risk he took. Before hopping off, he proved this:—

"That cockpit will be like a death chamber; my safe arrival in Paris will be a pardon from the governor."

GEORGE GIPP WAS OF SAME BREED

Sport has had its Lindberghs. George Gipp of Notre Dame was of the same quiet, courageous mold. You can picture him taking the same risk as Lindbergh took and acquitting himself as well.

Paul Berlenbach was just as fearless.

Tunney, facing Dempsey, the killer, showed the same high grade of mental bravery exhibited by the Western birdman. Sharkey, facing the menacing Harry Willis with nonchalance, displayed the same fine brand.

Ketchel, Bob Fitz, Dundee, Dempsey the Nonpareil, Little Bill Johnston were all brave above the ordinary.

Espee Puts On More Boats For Decoration Day

With more boats and added facilities for handling the automobile traffic across the Bay, Southern Pacific company is planning to accommodate a record crowd over the Decoration Day holidays, according to F. S. McGinnis, passenger traffic manager.

An automobile ferry boat will leave for Oakland Pier every eight minutes during the rush periods over the week-end. Frequent service will be maintained to Alameda and Richmond. The new facilities will permit the company to handle over 1100 automobiles an hour between the ferry building and Oakland pier.

In order to permit autoists to and from the north to take advantage of the direct run over the new Carquinez bridge the company increased its auto ferry service between San Francisco and Richmond from eight to 22 trips daily. On that route autoists can now ride a ferry every 45 minutes between 6 a. m. and 10:30 a. m. when hourly service continues until 5:15 p. m. A 45-minute service is then resumed until 7:30 p. m. From then until 12:30 midnight service is hourly.

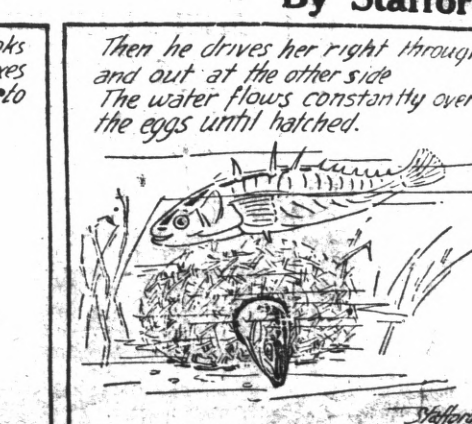

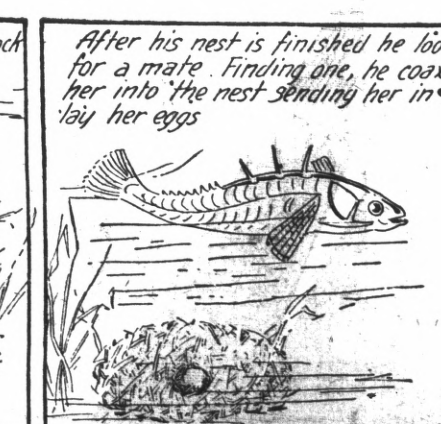

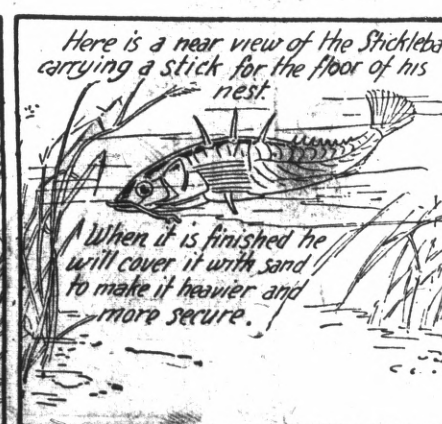

For returning motorists Sunday night, Monday and early Tuesday morning extra boats will be available to meet the demand so that there will be no delay. Special boats will be operated early Tuesday morning for those motorists who plan to return for the business day.

STENDERS RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stender of 111 Nevins avenue have been welcomed back to Richmond following the 10 day motor trip the couple made through the southern part of the state. They were accompanied by Mr. Stender's mother, Mrs. Julius Stender of 1018 Forty-first street, Oakland.

DOUGALL NINE TO PLAY TWO HOLIDAY TILTS

Two games have been scheduled by the Dougall Hardware company on Sunday and Monday. Sunday the "Intransigent" will journey to San Leandro to tackle the East Madison Variety club of that city while on Decoration Day, the locals will cross bats with the Carmen's Union, No. 192 at the First Street park. The Carmen lineup includes such celebrities as Johnny Huzefka, Dode Carson and Johnny Hanson. Fans wishing to see a real ball game from start to finish realize the bitter rivalry existing between the Dougall's and the Carmen.

Members of the Hardware aggregation seriously regret the illness of outfielder Gaston Muylle, who has been confined to bed by a serious attack of scarlet fever. Muylle, undoubtedly, will not be in uniform during the holiday games.

Following is the record of the Dougall's this year.

attack and having no telephone in his home had rushed to the garage and had died before he could move the automobile.

2.—He had been ill, had gone to get his automobile and had been suffocated by carbon monoxide gas.

The battery of the machine had been run down, and the switch of the car was on, although the motor was not running when Nielson entered the garage this morning. From the position of Siemann's body, it appeared that he might have been attempting to start the car.

No marks of any violence appeared on Siemann's body, according to Dr. H. A. Clattenburg, who performed an autopsy. The house was in perfect order and neighbors declared that Siemann never used intoxicating liquor.

Siemann departed last week for Macdonald with his wife and eight-year-old daughter. He returned by himself Tuesday night, according to Mrs. Nielson who said that she heard him enter the home. She said that she heard the sound of piano playing in the home about 9 o'clock the following morning and believes that it was Siemann's playing as she frequently heard him practicing the same tunes.

The stomach was sent to the chemist at Stanford university for analysis as a precautionary measure. The widow was expected to arrive from Macdonald early tomorrow.

Siemann was about 35 years of age and had been a resident of this city for many years. He was a member of the real estate firm of Dusch and Siemann.

Girl Attempts To Take Lysol In Suicide Try

Mrs. Idell Del Maestro, 21, of 116 First street, is recovering from burns received when she attempted to take her life in a fit of despondency over ill health yesterday morning.

Her brother, Eugene Burnskill, of 11, First street, is also suffering from burns received when he attempted to forestall his sister's attempt to take her life.

Burnskill, according to police report, came upon his sister just as she was about to drink lysol from a bottle. The youth succeeded in knocking the bottle from her hands, but its contents were spilled over both persons. Mrs. Maestro's face and shoulders were badly burned, while her brother received burns about both legs, hands and feet.

Mrs. Sarah Daugherty, mother of the two young people, attempted first aid measures without success, finally calling Officer George Beutler, who took them to the Alameda Emergency hospital for treatment.

Missionaries Blame Soviet For Outrages In Chinese War Zone

HONOLULU, May 27.—Seventeen missionaries, representing the Presbyterian, Episcopal, Christian and Quaker churches, who arrived here today from China, have placed the blame for the recent Nanking outrages on the Communist branch of the National party.

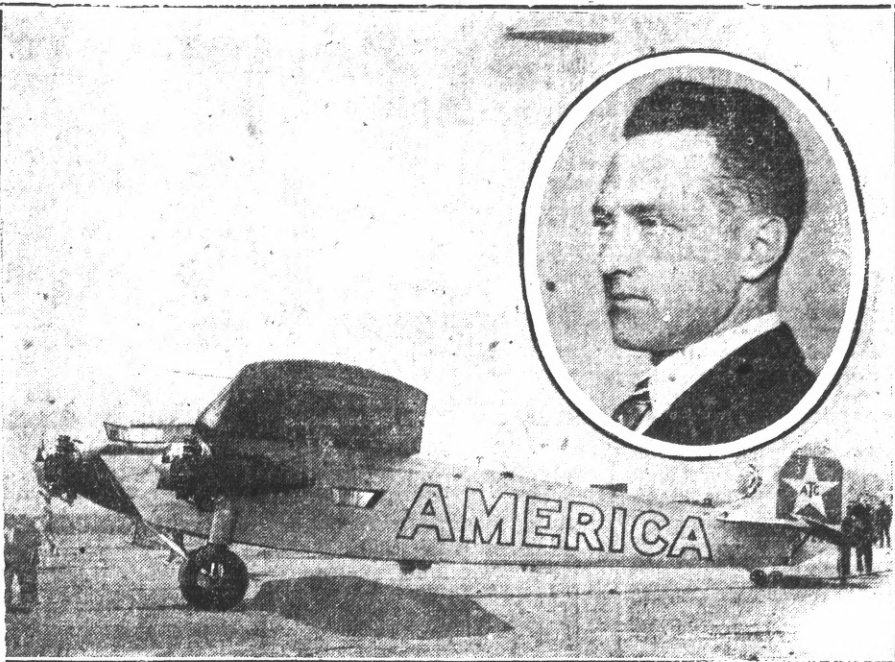

The missionaries signed a statement saying the outrages were perpetrated with the knowledge and approval of leaders of the party. The rioters, according to the missionaries, looted and burned foreign homes and schools, attempted to murder foreigners and attack foreign women. The statement asserted the bombardment of the city was the only think which prevented wholesale slaughter of the foreigners in the city.

NOTED LAWYER PROTEST FILED ON LAST CASE AGAINST RISKS TAKEN BY AGE

CHICAGO, May 27.—Charles E. Erbshtein, famous criminal and divorce lawyer, lost his last case today. He died at his home here of pneumonia. He was 51 years old.

Members of his family and his law partners, were present at the bedside when the end came. He had suffered a relapse during the night, when it was believed his recovery was certain.

Erbshtein gained his fame through untiring work on behalf of his clients.

His first big moment came when officials were about to hang "Jockey" Briggs at the old county jail in 1905. Briggs was on the scaffold, his arms strapped, the mask around his head and the rope around his neck, when Erbshtein ran breathlessly into the jail with a stay of execution. He was then just an obscure young lawyer.

At a second trial, defended by Erbshtein, Briggs was acquitted, and a few years later another man confessed his crime.

Erbshtein's greatest trial, probably was that of Madelyn Obach, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy. The trial was held at Los Angeles. She was acquitted and is now free.

He has defended seventy-one persons charged with murder. Not one of them have hanged, and only one has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Born of poor parents in Cleveland he came to Chicago at an early age. He sold papers on the streets to get money for an education. He was graduated from the Chicago law college and was admitted to the bar in 1897.

Since then his rise has been phenomenal.

He operated radio station WTAS at Elgin, Ill., and was one of the most popular announcers of the air.

aviation but always under the greatest possible guarantee against mishap. Men of that calibre are too precious for the future of aviation and the future of international relations to be allowed to risk their lives on mere travelling in the air.

As Capt. Lindbergh, himself, is at present resolved to give his entire attention to the development of commercial long distance aviation, there should not be any difficulty in preventing him from further attempts at long distance flights just now.

"It is true," say the French, "that the Paris-Brussels and Paris-London trips must be nothing to him after the gruelling thirty-six hours across the Atlantic, but the air currents over the earth are much more treacherous than in flying over the ocean."

"His plane may be in perfect order but who can fortell what slight incident might happen to its motor? How can one be sure that a spark of dust may not find its way into the gasoline, or a sparking plug suddenly stop operating."

"Landings also present innumerable chances for trouble. Lindbergh is a master and the world has no doubt of it, but the fields are not always smooth. A mischance for him not to curb his enthusiasm for the sake of the progress of mankind."

Thus reason the French solons. Thus Lindbergh may yet be prevented from hopping off tomorrow for Brussels and from there to London. If public opinion in his own country makes itself sufficiently heard by him.

The immense responsibility which his historic achievement has placed on his shoulders, is just beginning to dawn upon Lindbergh. When alighting at Le Bourget Field Saturday night he had never imagined the tremendous importance of his success. In his youthful, enthusiastic, modest mind he saw himself as a sporting pioneer carrying the American flag to victory in a field of individual sporting achievements.

So much is clear to all those who have been close to him since his arrival. Now, however, he is beginning to understand that so far as France is concerned, for instance, it is in the very words of Ambassador Herrick to the French chamber solemnly assembled to greet him, "A real United States of America ambassador to France."

From a political standpoint, the infant Lindbergh must today be thanked for smoothing over innumerable tiny difficulties which lately have arisen on the political horizon between the two great republics. Since last internal political reasons forced the French down, since the continuous rising in the cost of living here, there is no question but that the French now look upon American visitors with less favor than before.

A misguided French press had accused America and Americans of the barb of a shyness. Then suddenly out of the sky Lindbergh alighted at Le Bourget Field in the very heart of France. No one knew who he was; no one had ever heard of him or his preparations. There had been no cloud stories of bickerings about money prizes, insurance tanglers or the like.

"Lindbergh? who's that? when did he start? On what machine? Who is financing him? And why? Were questions on everybody's lips. The simple sporting side, the unassuming manners of the youthful aviator, his disregard for money or personal profit, his modesty in the face of a grandiose achievement were not lost on the quick intelligence and hypersensitiveness of the French. He became the idol of the whole country, and all the citizens of his country benefitted, at the same time by the wave of heartfelt sympathy now sweeping the whole of France.

All the nonsensical pin pricks, stirred up by a partisan press, are forgotten. The greatness of this son of America has effaced everything, throwing into utmost relief the fundamental greatness of his country.

All Americans who are in France today feel a difference in the very air.

"American?"

"Yep."

"Vive l'Americain."

This terse exchange of amenities is a usual occurrence on the streets of Paris today, and it is due to Lindbergh.

French politicians are not slow to realize the importance of this change of mood of the masses. Carefully and masterfully led by Ambassador Herrick, the manifestation of sympathy of the French towards the American hero can do no less than create such a feeling of sympathy and understanding between the two countries that will have a far-reaching effect on the future political and financial relations.

All questions now in abeyance, including that of the French debt, are bound to be affected favorably.

If Lindbergh's dream of regular passenger and commercial airlines between America and Europe has materialized within four or five years, as he predicts, a revolution is sure to take place in the commercial, economic and political of the old and new continents.

And compared with the enormous potentialities of its near future development, the present day problems—so feel far-seeing Frenchmen—are automatically reduced in geometrical ratio.

For this reason, and for the really heartfelt affections which Lindbergh has awakened in 40,000,000 Frenchmen, all France would rather see their American blonde idol take a special train to Brussels than watch him disappear behind the gathering clouds off Le Bourget Field in his plane.
